I have personally observed over the years, how Microsoft has destroyed it's competitors in the computing field. There used to be so many different companies out there; each offering their vision of what makes a good solution to a particular problem. Now, there are only a few foolish enough to take on the Microsoft giant.

Over and over again we have seen MS take notice of a new technology and then either buy it or reverse engineer it and then give it away. In either case the competition is gone and MS strengthens it's stranglehold on the industry.

Do not let them continue without strict oversight. MS has done so much damage already, don't let it continue.
